The novel follows the story of Ruby Daly, a 16-year-old girl who is classified as a dangerous 'Orange' in a world where children with extraordinary abilities are feared and persecuted.

In a post-apocalyptic America, a mysterious disease known as IAAAN (Idiopathic Adolescent Acute Neurodegeneration) has wiped out most of the country's children. Those who survived are left with extraordinary abilities, but they are also feared and hated by the adults who remain. The government has rounded up these children and placed them in internment camps, where they are subjected to cruel and inhumane treatment.

Ruby is one of these children. She is classified as an Orange, which means that she has the ability to manipulate electricity. Ruby is a powerful Orange, but she is also kind and compassionate. She refuses to let the government control her or her friends, and she fights for their freedom and survival.

As Ruby and her fellow Orange allies fight for their freedom, they uncover a sinister plot that threatens the very fabric of society. The government is experimenting on the children, and they are trying to create a new breed of super-soldiers. Ruby and her friends must stop the government before it's too late, but they will have to sacrifice everything they hold dear.
