A Childhood of Darkness

From the tender age of four, Erika Rogers Holland's life was a relentless cycle of physical, emotional, and sexual abuse. Her childhood home was a battleground where fear and violence reigned supreme. Her mother, a victim of her own childhood trauma, struggled to protect her children from their abusive father. Erika recalls spending nights huddled in closets, trying to escape the torment that filled her home.

Breaking the Cycle

As Erika grew older, the realization dawned upon her that she could not allow her past to define her future. With unwavering determination, she escaped her abusive environment and sought refuge in a local shelter. It was there that she found a beacon of hope and support, embarking on a journey of healing and self-discovery.

Erika delved into therapy, where she confronted the painful memories of her childhood. Through writing and journaling, she poured out her emotions, finding solace in expressing the unspeakable. Gradually, she began to chip away at the layers of trauma that had imprisoned her for so long.

Empowerment Through Entrepreneurship

Inspired by her own experiences, Erika made a conscious decision to use her voice to empower other survivors. She founded Tears To Triumph, a non-profit organization dedicated to providing support, resources, and education to victims of domestic violence and sexual assault.

Through Tears To Triumph, Erika launched a successful clothing line featuring empowering messages and imagery. A portion of the proceeds from each sale goes towards supporting the organization's mission. By blending her passion for fashion with her advocacy work, Erika created a tangible way for survivors to reclaim their power and dignity.
