The Candidates

was a businessman and reality TV star before entering politics. Biden was a Democratic challenger who had served as vice president under Barack Obama from 2009 to 2017. He was a career politician with over 30 years of experience in the Senate.

Trump was a populist who campaigned on promises to "Make America Great Again." He appealed to working-class voters who felt that the country was being left behind by globalization and economic change. Biden was a moderate who campaigned on a promise to "restore the soul of America." He appealed to voters who were concerned about Trump's divisive rhetoric and policies.

The Policies

Trump and Biden had very different policy positions on a wide range of issues.

On the economy, Trump promised to cut taxes, reduce regulations, and renegotiate trade deals. Biden promised to raise taxes on wealthy Americans and corporations, invest in infrastructure, and expand access to affordable healthcare.

On healthcare, Trump promised to repeal the Affordable Care Act, while Biden promised to expand the program and create a public option.

On climate change, Trump promised to withdraw from the Paris Agreement, while Biden promised to rejoin the agreement and invest in clean energy.

On immigration, Trump promised to build a wall on the southern border and restrict legal immigration. Biden promised to end family separation at the border and provide a path to citizenship for undocumented immigrants.

On foreign policy, Trump promised to "America First" and withdraw from international agreements. Biden promised to restore American leadership in the world and rejoin international agreements.

The Strategies

Trump and Biden used very different strategies to win the election.

Trump relied on a populist message that appealed to his base of supporters. He held large rallies and used social media to spread his message. He also attacked Biden personally and made false claims about his record.

Biden ran a more traditional campaign. He focused on his policy positions and his experience in government. He also tried to appeal to voters who were concerned about Trump's divisive rhetoric and policies.

The Impact

The 2020 presidential election was a close and contentious race. In the end, Biden won the popular vote by over 7 million votes and the Electoral College by 306 to 232.

The election had a profound impact on America's future. Biden's victory represented a rejection of Trump's divisive rhetoric and policies. It also gave Democrats control of the White House, the Senate, and the House of Representatives.

Biden has since taken steps to reverse Trump's policies and restore American leadership in the world. He has also focused on addressing the COVID-19 pandemic and the economic crisis.

The 2020 presidential election was a turning point in American history. It remains to be seen what the long-term impact of the election will be, but it is clear that the country is on a new path.
