Through stunning imagery and poetic text, Michael Ende invites us to discover the magic of our own imaginations and the power of dreams to shape our world.

The story begins with a young child who dreams of flying. One day, she wakes up to find that she has grown wings. She is overjoyed and takes to the skies, exploring the world from a new perspective. As she flies, she encounters a wise old man who tells her that she has a special gift: the ability to build magic cities.

The child is hesitant at first, but the old man encourages her to follow her dreams. He tells her that magic cities are built on imagination and creativity, and that she has the power to create anything she can imagine.

The child takes the old man's advice to heart and begins to build her own magic city. She uses her imagination to create beautiful buildings, lush gardens, and sparkling rivers. She invites all the children of the world to come and live in her city, and soon it becomes a thriving and vibrant community.
